Celestino Cassone moved to Argentina from Italy in the late 19th century and in the 1950's his son, Roberto, bought his first vineyard. Roberto passed it on to his son, Eduardo, and in 1999, Eduardo, together with his sons, built a new winery following the traditional Mendoza style in, Lujan de Cuyo.

Located in this place known as the "Primera Zona" for making first quality wines, the sunny weather and the thermal amplitude are some of the special characteristics of the Lujan de Cuyo region that guarantee the freshness and harmony of our wines.
